

Standards Organizations

AAMI

Association for the Advancement of Medical Instrumentation

is a nonprofit organization whose mission is the development, management, and use of safe and effective health technology. AAMI is the primary source of consensus standards, both national and international, for the medical device industry.

IEC

International Electrotechnical Commission

is a nonprofit organization that develops and publishes standards concerning electrical technologies. It is Headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland.

ISO

International Organization for Standardization

is a nonprofit organization that develops and publishes standards of virtually every possible sort, ranging from standards for information technology to fluid dynamics and nuclear energy. Headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland.

ANSI

American National Standards Institute

is the primary organization for fostering the development of technology standards in the United States.

ASA

the Acoustical Society of America is a nonprofit organization that develops and publishes standards on acoustics, mechanical shock, noise and other associated subjects.

IES

the Illuminating Engineering Society

is a nonprofit organization that develops and publishes standards regarding lighting. Headquartered in New York City,

NEMA

the National Electrical Manufacturers Association

is a nonprofit organization that develops and publishes over 500 standards regarding the production and manufacturing processes for technologies involving the generation, transmission and use of electricity. Headquartered near Washington, D.C.

IEEE

Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers

fosters the development of standards that often become national and international standards.

BSI

British Standards Institution

is a service organization that produces standards across a wide variety of industry sectors.